

MORITSGARDEN COLIVING

your welcome letter

Xenia, one of our true and first coworkers and an important friend of Bjørkedal. She finished her Phd in Moritsgarden, and she is also a fantastic musician for healing chants Moritsgarden is a social experiment, a rural coliving coworkingplace and part of an ongoing work to save the little village of Bjørkedal.

Your stay is not only a workation. By being here, you contribute to the important work of waking Bjørkedal up from its sleep. Like so many villages in Europe, Bjørkedal suffer from eviction and the problem of only the elderly staying back. You can not force young and well educated people to settle in the rural areas, but the digital nomad lifestyle is a fantastic way of offering a stay for a month of two, contribute with your vibrations and optimism, and you get back some learning and understanding of life that is otherwise almost extinguished.

how to get here

FROM OSLO OR BERGEN

Our nearest airports are Aalesund lufthavn Vigra, Volda/Ørsta Hovden and also Sandane. The two last ones are small airports but have direct flights from Oslo and Bergen. And if you are a student or under 25, they have good deals. They are both close and we pick you up. From Ålesund there are buses every hour to Volda, where we pick you up.

From Bergen you can also take the katamaran on the coast to Måløy. We pick you up there.

The bus from Bergen to Nordfjordeid is slow and boring and we do not recommend.

From Oslo airport there are also two buses every day to Nordfjordeid or Volda, where we pick you up. These are 8 hours, but the scenery over the mountains is worth it. yy buss

MORITSGARDEN

We try to not make rules for the sake of rules. Nomad life is beautiful because it is changing all the time, the people in the society change, and so do we.

Still, there are some points that we want to remind you so that we are sure that we do not have to remind each other

We do not mention things like tidyness, respect and space for each other. They are so logic in a tribe that we think they grow stronger by the people in Moritsgarden.

Some people like to make a mark after them, to redecorate or rearrange. Please do not do this. Put things back in their order. You can tidy up and make small changes, but the space for each thing be like it is even if you get a better idea.

If you get lonely or nervous, please try to take it like a personal meditation and avoid dramas or arguments to get out frustration. We have so much nature, you are only treading here for some time. Exercise patience, exercise enjoyment of the differences. Breathe and inspire, and changes come naturally. Enjoy. Life is good.

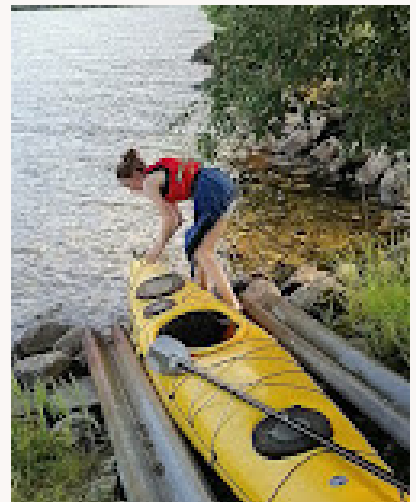

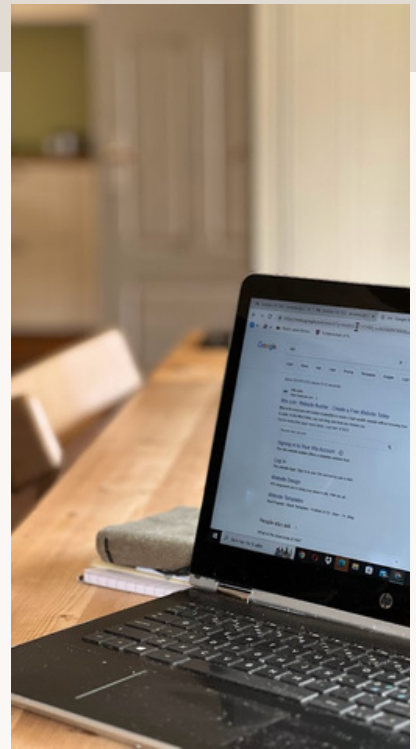

All bedrooms have comfortable beds, writing desk, extra monitor and lounge chair.

The coworking area is in the oldest part of the building.

The communal kitchen is old fashioned but well equipped and with plenty space for cooking and storing.

Two bathrooms with shower and two extra toilets in the basement.

Kayaks and bikes and a spare car. And miles and miles of hiking tracks, mountains and magic forests.

WE ARE IN LOVE. COME BY AND SAY HI.

We have got the old school in Bjørkedal for free. What an opportunity, what a challenge, what a fun thing in life that is. Here we have space for your creativity and ideas, since the school will start to happen and take form this season. We also are in deep need of hands and handy and fun and inspiring people.
